Home Depot agreement finalized by agency

At a special meeting held Tuesday afternoon, the City Council, acting as the Redevelopment Agency, amended and finalized agreements between the agency and Home Depot, USA, Inc, for a 10.4-acre site along Broadway.

According to Assistant City Manager Doug Yount, escrow is expected to close once signed documents are presented to Home Depot, probably Friday or Monday.

Yount noted that Home Depot has not yet competed its studies of property contamination.

The studies conducted by the city-hired consultant found the petro-chemical during soil studies at the site. It is believed to have "migrated" there from a nearby gas station, Yount said.

Also at the meeting, council approved the vacation and abandonment of a small portion of North Avenue, to be used in relation to the Home Depot project.

Mt. Miguel's speech team gunning for the top

by Lindy Magner

Its been a banner year for Mt. Miguel High School's speech team, with one of its newest members qualifying for the prestigious national championship, and nine of its 45 members qualifying for this weekend's state championship.

"Our team has won over 100 trophies this year," said speech and drama teacher Myrna Goodwin, adding that the school has the second highest number of students qualifying for the state championships from schools countywide.

Sophomore Matt Bradford's second-place win in the All Southern California Qualifier competition in the "humorous" category distinguishes him as the only student from the Grossmont Union High School District invited to the national competition in Indianapolis, June 12-19.

"Going to the national competition is a real honor - it's an elite group; in the last 30 years, Mt. Miguel has been represented in that tournament eight times," she said.

Though Goodwin is bubbling over with pride, Bradford is more subdued.

"The major thing is to do well in the state and national competitions, and I haven't done that yet," he said, adding that his qualifying win came as a "shock."

"I couldn't believe it, I was overwhelmed," he said, noting that this is his first year on the team.

In competition, he performs dialogue from the movie, "Monty Python and the Holy Grail."

"I pretend to do sword fights and make funny faces," he said in describing his presentation.

"The main thing is to keep up the intensity. When you see some-

Graffiti paint-out a success

Members of the city's Community Advisory Committee were overwhelmed last Saturday when more than twice the number of volunteers expected to participate in a graffiti paint-out actually showed.

Assistant City Manager Doug Yount, who heads the committee, reported that over 300 volunteers turned out Saturday, and about 100 on Sunday. Only 150 had been expected on Saturday, with about 50 expected Sunday.

"We ran out of paint and everything else," said committee member Jerry May.

"We were overwhelmed, but it shows that the community is really behind us," he said, adding that because of the many volunteers, all locations the committee had hoped to paint-out were covered.

The only problem was that in some places, the graffiti was back the next morning.

"The freeway properties got hit again," said Yount.

The committee had originally thought it would have volunteers patrolling the sites at night, insuring that graffiti was not repainted, but that plan was put on hold.

According to May, the event brought "lots of good suggestions," as well as commitments from service groups and others who want to continue with graffiti paint-out efforts.

The event was funded with almost $1,200 in donations, said Yount.

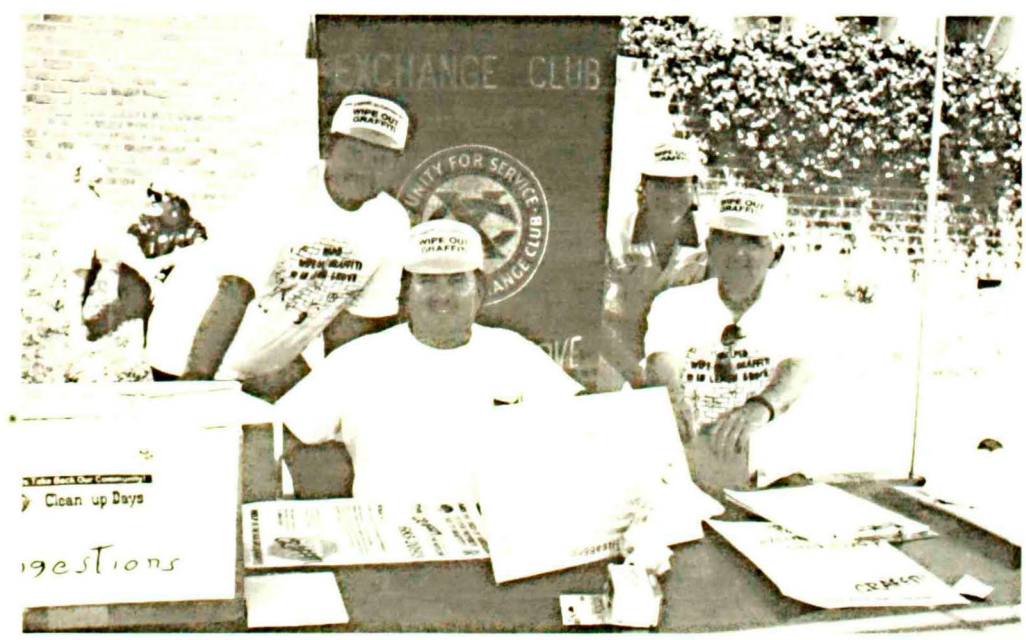

"This means that the event was funded without financial support from the city," Yount added.

He noted that the committee will now begin work on an "adopt-a-block" program in which groups will keep a specific area graffiti-free.

Graffiti paint-out drew droves of helpers

Volunteers came in all sizes and from far and wide to help paint out graffiti. Local businesses, service clubs and residents donated money, services, supplies and labor to make the weekend effort a whopping success. However, organizers realize that the battle isn't won, and that a continuous effort will be necessary to combat the problem of graffiti. See story at left.

Grossmont Center to host Fire Expo

The East County Fire Departments have a big day planned for Saturday, May 1, as Grossmont Center hosts this year's Fire Service Expo, sponsored by the San Diego County Fire Chiefs from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. for a funfilled and educational day. Smokey Bear will be greeting the crowd.

Start the day out meeting firefighters and other emergency personnel from all over San Diego County at a large display of fire engines and equipment. There will be puppet shows throughout the day; fire-engine rides; and a rescue demonstration in which firefighters, police and paramedics arrive on scene at a rescue traffic accident. Firefighters will then perform a live auto-extrication demonstration.

Also, various health and wellness education booths will be offered.

Helix librarian wins equipment grant from library association

Karen Skullerud, library media teacher at Helix High School, wrote the winning grant application for the 1993 Gene White Memorial Program Improvement Grant. The grant of $2,000 is given annually by the California Media and Library Educators Association (CMLEA) to a project that reflects creativity and the effective use of library media resources to meet curriculum goals.

The grant will be used to purchase a laser station for the Helix High School library. The station will be in place next school year, and include a laser disc player and software, a television, a video recorder, and a computer.

Using the laser station, students can produce group reports for science, geography and English, while also learning how to use technology. Skullerud said her inspiration came from an idea presented at last year's CMLEA conference.

Lemon Grove Hardware to change ownership

In about two weeks, Lemon Grove Hardware will have a new owner, though the face will be familiar to those who frequent the Broadway store.

David Poland, store manager, is buying the business from Roy Snaer, who is retiring. The change of ownership is expected May 10.

Though Snaer had originally thought the siting of a Home Depot store on Broadway would make it difficult for him to sell his store and retire, he stated that those fears have been allayed.

"The way we figured it out, Home Depot will be an asset. We've talked to the Home Depot people, and they've agreed to recommend customers here for items they don't have," said Snaer, who bought the store seven years ago after being the store's manager.

"I first thought Home Depot would be devastating to our type of business, but I've talked to other hardware stores which have been in the same situation, and they were encouraging," he added.

Poland is on vacation until May 10 and could not be reached for comment.

Local Pearl Harbor Survivors hosting statewide convention

The Pearl Harbor Survivors Association, Carnation Chapter 3, San Diego, the largest chapter in the United States, will host the 32nd Annual State Convention in San Diego on May 6-9.

This is a non-profit organization formed in 1958 for the purpose of keeping America alert and keeping alive the memory of those who died at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

A business meeting will be held May 8 at 10 a.m. at the Town and Country Hotel, 500 Circle North. Members of Pearl Harbor Survivors are invited to attend. Several resolutions will be voted upon.

A banquet will be held at 5:30 on May 8 in the Mission Ballroom. Guest speakers will include: John Finn, last surviving Pearl Harbor Medal of Honor Winner; Rep. Duke Cunningham; Rep. Duncan Hunter; Capt. James Harris, CO, Naval Amphibious Base; Capt. Maryanne Hayes, CO, Naval Training Center; and Michelle Rosenthal, student.

County Water Authority sets hearing on standby charge

The San Diego County Water Authority board of directors will hold a public hearing May 13 on continuance of the agency's water availability standby charge for another year. The hearing is scheduled for 4 p.m. at the authority office, 3211 Fifth Ave.

The standby charge is assessed annually on all property in the authority's service area. The annual charge is $10 per acre or per parcel, whichever is greater.

All revenue from the standby charge is devoted to the agency's capital improvement program, which was initiated in 1987 to ensure that the regional water supply is as reliable as possible.

If approved by the board, the water availability standby charge will raise approximately $10.9 million toward the authority's capital program in fiscal 1994.

Library honors volunteers

During Volunteer Week, April 18-24, the San Diego County Library honored the many volunteers who do such things as read to children, assist with the Summer Reading Program, work long hours at fund-raising, serve as advocates for the library, assist with many behind-the-scene activities and assist patrons directly.

Staff members at the Lemon Grove Library honored volunteers at the April 22 meeting of the Friends of the Lemon Grove Library. Cathy Heart, branch manager, came early to the library in order to prepare coffee and blueberry muffins which were served as awards were made to Laura Barrett, Anne Conrad, Ronald Day, Dorothy Geldreich, Pete Kaufman, Elizabeth Lane, Jack Moore, Rosemary and Dwight Putnam and Mary Vinson.

Each received a letter of appreciation from Sally Hazzard, interim library administrator of the San Diego County Library, and also received a personalized book plate which will be placed in whatever favorite library book that person selects. Each book will go back on the library shelves, bookplate in place, honoring that volunteer for invaluable service during 1992.

Dirk's to host 'Halloween II'

Dirk's Horseshoe Lounge, 7672 Broadway, will host its annual "Halloween II" event, Saturday, May 1.

There will be a costume contest with prizes and more.

Trolley tales

Since it has been sometime since I have mentioned the trolley, I am daring to once again expound.

The bright red cars are that way because of two things. I recently was given a tour of the maintenance and repair facility and saw firsthand how it is done. The main reason for the impeccable cleanliness is the general manager of the system, Langley Powell. He demands that perfection is the only level that is acceptable on his trains.

A crew from the Donovan Prison works daily to scrub, wash, and polish the exterior of the cars, and the interiors are cleaned and detailed, all on a regular basis. The inmates are carefully screened before being allowed to work on the cars, and are monitored with an eye toward recommendations for their diligence and ability. Apparently it is a welcomed relief from the boredom of incarceration, plus they are paid a small, hourly wage. Some have even been hired upon release by the trolley, or have some valuable references.

One of the guards was telling me that, after release, these men who have worked so hard in keeping the trolley clean, are very proud to see them in operation. They also are quite severe on anyone that they might observe undoing their handiwork. They take a dim view of desecrating the cars because they know, very well, how hard it is to clean them.

The maintenance shop is surgically clean as well. The cars are inspected daily, weekly, monthly, or anytime that the least problem occurs. At approximately 350,000 miles of service, the cars will be completely gone over. The traction motor, wheels, axles, and brakes are removed and reconditioned or replaced. The shop is capable of 100 percent repair, in-house, and is constantly contracting to do work for other light-rail systems. They were working on the drive trains for trolleys from Monterey, Mexico on this particular day. Truing-up of wheels, brake refurbishing and all electrical work is done in Langley's facility, and he runs it like a drill instructor commands a platoon.

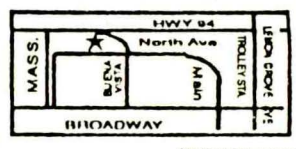

In an upstairs room, we saw a demonstration of the new TV surveillance of trolley stations. There are four cameras that give constant views of the station platforms and parking areas. They scan and telephoto from all angles and can pick up a car license number from a block away.

The new system will tape for record, and provide audio communication with the train operator as well as the station platform area. The versatility of the equipment is amazing, and it assures that just about anything that might occur in the area will be observed. Law enforcement, an ambulance or a fire station can be summoned directly from the booth's central control. The added personnel that have been put into the security organization, as well as this type of surveillance, will certainly make the trolleys more safe to ride.

In our travels to transit meetings and expos over the last 10 years, it has been a source of pride to see the San Diego Trolley held up as a shining example of what trolleys ought to be. Our fare-box recovery ratio of close to 100 percent is astounding to places like Washington, D. C. and San Francisco's BART. But even better is Siemens-Duwag bragging about their cars in pictures of those shiny San Diego Trolley cars gliding down "C" Street. It is axiomatic that one of the first prerequisites for a sound economy and a prosperous metropolis is an efficient transit system. MTDB is doing that job very admirably here in San Diego. If the rest of regional authorities were to do as well with the restrictive and cumbersome approaches to our other problems, San Diego would once again truly be America's Finest City.

Commentary

Waco - enough is enough

by Paul Treske

The utterly dreary drama of the Waco tragedy has been played out and the finger-pointing and pious hindsight is in full force. Although nothing went right in either the beginning or end of the sorry business, the current avalanche of blame-seeking is surely demonstrative of the country at its worst.

It was all wrong from the beginning. The seeming arrogance of the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF) people in assaulting the compound (rather than first trying the front door) when they knew their surprise had already been spilled, was, in retrospect, the major error. But once several ATF agents had been killed by return fire, the tragedy was on an irrevocable course. Had no one died in the initial skirmish, a different kind of siege (or lack of same) could have been initiated. But with the death of the agents, an accounting was unavoidable.

Those who argue that the ATF and FBI could have waited indefinitely are wrong. When people are killed, appropriate action must be taken.

Thus, the government, made weary by David Koresh's continued unkept promises to come out, and his seemingly endless delays, was forced into choosing one of a series of totally dangerous options. There simply was no option (I do not for a moment believe that appeals from the cult members' families would have budged Koresh or his true believers) that could be considered a "good" one. And so, an effort was made to inject tear gas and drive them out without shooting. Unfortunately, the result is there to see in the smoldering pile of rubble.

The fires had barely gone out when the hindsight finger-pointers leaped into action - each according to his or her own motive. TV pundits, ever seeking to make a big story even bigger, sought to pin fault somewhere. TV and radio talk-show honchos, those weirdly amoral seekers of scandal, went ballistic with extreme views and eerily far-out callers vying with each other for deeper motives and more twisted plots. Politicians, of course, found quick reason to attack their favorite "whipping children," be it the Attorney General on one side or the FBI on the other.

Wave two brought forth the lawyers of David Koresh, working, as always, to rewrite history before its facts are clear. Everywhere, the fingers point and blame, blame, blame lies heavily in the air.

William Shakespeare, and other classic authors, well understood that there are times when combinations of individuals, emotions and events so meet that tragedy is inevitable. There, in Waco, such factors were present from the outset: Federal agencies eager to "do their stuff;" a fanatical, charismatic leader who believes he is God and a group of followers who also believe; a fortress-like setting and arms of all sorts. The old "Bard of Avon" could have done wonders with such elements.

A careful analysis of those events, after all the evidence is studied, will be an appropriate follow-up, and out of such a process, blame, if it is necessary, can be meted out. But the orgy of bluster and blame we are hearing now serves no positive purpose except those of the politician and the demagogue. Enough is enough!

College chancellor to address League

The League of Women Voters has invited the new chancellor of the Grossmont-Cuyamaca Community College District to speak at the May Roundtable. Dr. Jeanne Atherton will share her views on the "Evolving Role of the Community College."

The Grossmont-Cajon Valley LWV will meet on Tuesday, May 4, noon-1 p.m., at the El Cajon Library, 200 E. Lexington.

Atherton, chancellor since January, will discuss future plans for the district, the impact of fees, transfer students, basic philosophy and challenges which face the community college.

The program will be followed with a question-and-answer period.

The public is invited. For more information, call 463-8843.

Hospice helps children deal with grief

Headaches, stomachaches, fatigue, behavior problems and school problems. These are some of the ways in which grief can manifest itself in children, especially if they don't communicate their feelings about the death of a loved one. The Hospice of Grossmont Hospital helps children deal with their grief in a special program called the "Kids' Loss Support Group."

The Kids' Loss Support Group is an innovative program for children between the ages of 7 and 13 who have suffered the death of a loved one. Whether the loss is a parent, sibling, close relative or friend, bereaved children learn to express their feelings through such media as art, music, drama, storytelling and visualization. They learn to deal with their grief by sharing it with their peers during a 10-week series of weekly meetings. Parents attend a concurrent adult bereavement group.

Kay Askew, social service coordinator for the Hospice of Grossmont Hospital, said special groups like these are needed for children because they grieve differently than adults.

"They can mourn for long periods, and their grief may go unrecognized, showing up later as a behavioral or physical problem," said Askew.

"It helps kids to talk to other children who can understand their fears, anger and frustration without having to explain it," she added.

A new group will begin on Wednesday, May 5; meetings will be held from 4:30 to 6 p.m. at the Hospice of Grossmont Hospital, located at 8881 Fletcher Parkway, Suite 310, in La Mesa. Insurance help is available to cover the $100 fee.

For additional information, call 463-9911.

Good Samaritans sought by crisis program

Trauma Intervention Programs (TIP) of San Diego County, Inc., a 1991 Innovations Award recipient, is seeking citizen volunteers for its East County crisis intervention program. Volunteers will be trained to help fellow citizens who are in distress as a result of having been the victim of a crime or other traumatic event. Volunteers are called to the scene by a police officer or firefighter to assist citizens who are despondent, victims of burglary and robbery, family members of suicide or sudden death, family disputes, disoriented older persons and other crisis situations.

The first few hours after a crisis situation has occurred are very confusing for everyone involved and the TIP volunteers provide the necessary temporary support until the persons involved in the crisis are able to depend on family, friends and others.

The volunteer is not expected to be a professional in these situations, but to provide basic emotional support, practical assistance and referral to professionals. This support is very important to victims, but often police officers and firefighters don't have the time to provide it.

The 50-hour training class schedule begins on Tuesday, June 9, and runs through Sunday, June 20. No prior experience is necessary to attend training or to become a volunteer. The East County TIP program went on line Oct. 23, 1992 and the volunteers have been busy responding to the many calls received to date from the emergency personnel in East County.

For a complete schedule of training times and further information, call Carol Purcell at 697-4936 before June 5.

From Where I Sit

Running the gauntlet

by Frank Andrews

In the Fall of 1936, I was one of the 75 members of the freshman class at Wayzata High. I had just graduated that previous spring from Bederwood Elementary #91 at Stubbs Bay as both valedictorian and salutatorian of the class (of course, I was the only pupil in the 1936 graduating class).

We lived about 15 miles from the high school, so Daddy had to pay $5 per week for the old "Red Dragon" to pick me up at our crossroad. That school bus was old and did look something like a red dragon.

Vic, the bus driver, had little control over his youthful passengers and all hell broke out nearly every trip, going to or coming from school. Throwing the girls' hats out the window was the usual prank, but the prank of all pranks was the day we threw Phil, a fellow rowdy, through the rear emergency exit of the bus. For that "cardinal sin," I was prohibited from riding the bus for a whole week.

About two weeks into the school year, the yearly freshmen's initiation took place. The high school building was perched atop high land affording the most beautiful view of Wayzata Bay, a portion of the Lake Minnetonka chain that would make ol' Longfellow proud. The cruel and indecent treatment of us sweet, young fledglings started at the bottom of the long, steep hill, a long block up to the school. All the upper classmen stood in single file on both sides of the sidewalk all the way up the hill with their belts poised for action. That was the longest hill I have traversed, as every belt-blow had a sting. Some of the meaner boys would hit you with the buckle end which would usually draw blood and leave a welt. If a plebe wore a magazine in his pants for protection and was found out, it meant an additional "running of the gauntlet." This hazing was finally stopped by concerned mothers.

I went out for sports but never excelled in any. I tried wrestling, but during my first bout with an experienced upper classman, the big bruiser got me down with my head between his knees and his hand over my nose and mouth. I was stuck and came up gasping for air; I quit that sport immediately after I got my breath.

Instead of sports, I became the president of the Hobby Club and stage manager, which included building sets for the many school plays. I took all the shop courses allowed, and appreciate it to this day, as I have always been a handy guy around the house. Through slick salesmanship and very little studying I managed to breeze through high school with a 'B' average, ready for the "harsh world" beyond.

Country-Western club to open soon

By late May, those looking for a place to kick up their heels won't have to travel far, when "Boots," a Country-Western club opens in the Rancho San Diego Village Shopping Center, Highway 94 at Avocado Boulevard.

Jack Campagna, owner of two San Diego pizza/deli establishments, is trying his hand at operating a Country-Western club.

Remodeling of the former Sizzler restaurant is now underway, and includes the installation of a 1,600 square-foot dance floor and two large bars. The banquet room is also being renovated, though it will still be used for banquets as well as catering weddings and hosting weekend brunches.

The restaurant will serve steaks, seafood, and Tex-Mex, and "cater to families," said Campagna.

He noted that this type of establishment was not what first came to his mind when he thought of opening something a little different from his pizza/delis which he opened six years ago.

"Originally, I was going to open an Italian restaurant and nightclub downtown, but then this location came along," he said, noting that a friend who owns a successful Country-Western club in Indianapolis convinced him to give a dance club a whirl.

Boots is expected to open between May 15-30, depending on completion of remodeling.

World War II aircraft to be displayed at Gillespie Field

History buffs will thank the Collings Foundation of Stow, Massachusetts, for bringing to East County two of World War II's greatest bombers.

On Wednesday May 5, at 3 p.m., the B-17 Flying Fortress "Nine-O-Nine" and the B-24 Liberator "All American" will arrive at Gillespie Field in El Cajon. They will be on display at the airport terminal area Wednesday afternoon until dark, Thursday, May 6, from 8 a.m. till 6:30 p.m. and Friday, May 7, from 8:30 a.m. until departure at 2 p.m.

During World War II, B-24 Liberators, designed and built in San Diego and four other locations, dropped more bombs and flew more missions than any other American aircraft. B-24s served the Allies in every theater of the war and were the most produced American aircraft of all time. The "All American" is the only flying and fully restored B-24 in the world!

The B-17 Flying Fortress was widely recognized for its high altitude strategic bombing effectiveness and its ability to absorb tremendous punishment and bring its crew back alive.

There is no charge to view the aircraft, however, tours of the restored aircraft are available for a donation of $7 for adults and $3 for children. The donations are applied to the cost of operating and preserving the aircraft.

Please do not call Gillespie Field Airport for information. This visit is in cooperation with the San Diego-based International B-24 Liberator Club.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Recognizing God by honoring Him with public acknowledgments or symbols is not forcing a particular religion on anyone. However, insisting on a nationwide denial of God's existence is tantamount to forcing atheism on everyone.

When only negative views that express rejection of the wisdom of honoring God are advanced, and affirmative views for honoring Him are denied approval, then freedom of religion is either dead or dying. Such death is the objective of many. When this happens, it means that by judicial decree, for all practical purposes, that denial of the existence of God becomes mandatory on all the citizens of the land.

When a citizen objects to something he or she knows to be completely wrong, he or she is only doing what is right. If silence prevails and no stand is taken, then such silence gives consent to something that is wrong. When those who would denounce the things of God put to silence those who would speak of Him, what then?

Can anyone observe a universe that operates for eons of time with mathematical precision conclude it is accidental? Can anyone observe the beauty of this earth, the interdependency of all living creatures, the intricate relationship of all nature in ecological cooperation and maintain the Divine Intellect was not present?

If the judicial system, by the implementation of some technicality, denies the citizens the freedom to express their admiration and appreciation for God's providence, is not a mockery made of justice?

When the source of all authority is denied, then nothing of spiritual intelligence remains. When truth is made unacceptable on this basis of a technicality, how can a judgment be good or sound?

If the standards, ideals and principles of Christianity and Judaism are to be made legally invalid, then only moral and spiritual anarchy would prevail. God, through Moses, gave the Ten Commandments to the world. He did this at a time when spiritual anarchy did prevail. Remember the worship of the golden calf?
